Continuing life exists at North

Allowing for lots of memories

Life goes on as long as time may take it. The life of the North Side spirit and education goes on into infinity, just as a circle never ends.

High school is said to be the time of our lives. Then why is it that every night, including weekends, students walked out the doors with armfuls of books to study and papers to write? Most likely to keep the cycle of excellent students and future dreams growing. This was the time of our lives, the time to think about our goals, our friends, our spirit, and also some fun.

Many activities throughout the school year, such as spirit weeks, homecoming, prom, and graduation have brought these factors to the students.

"Having the many activities that North Side has makes for a great school year and it also show off our spirit!" said Kathy Schlup, senior.

Though students will do different things with their lives, the memories and friendships at North Side are never ending.

Summer suddenly arrives at your door

Allowing for no cares at all...

The dog days of summer that the students eagerly anticipated had finally arrived. Typical Redskins spent half of their day in bed getting their well-earned sleep, after staying out until the wee hours of the morning. Once one flopped out of bed, the rest of the day could be spent covering their bodies with oil to prepare them to be baked in the hot rays of the sun. This was Redskins' version of sun worship. Still other students had to get up at the crack of dawn to go to summer school or possibly a summer job. "I got up a three every morning to deliver papers; then I had to babysit at eight. All I did last summer was work!" said Tammy Lesley, junior.

Summer-time jobs ranged from babysitting to fast-food restaurants or clothing stores at the mall. Some students even held more than one job or balanced summer classes and a part-time job.

Vacation can mean a trip to the lake or to grandma's for the summer. Fortunate students had the opportunity to go to California, Florida, or tropical spots. "I went to Florida, Wisconsin, The Bahamas, New Orleans, Michigan, Cedar Point a few times, and I think that's it," said Eric Pape, junior.

When you started to think that you hadn't a care in the world, reality set in mail from a forgotten place called North Side started arriving. Then school started over again, and the students waited for the next vacation.

Age before beauty? Mr. Overmyer sports his summer fashion while visiting with Beth Wells, senior.

Live it up on the weekends

But don't forget the homework

Although the joys of summer are something students look forward to all year long, the fun does not stop when school begins.

Sports, band and other activities can help to pass the time after 2:35 p.m.. Homework and jobs also cut down on some Redskins' free time. "Working during the week made me more tires and it also interfered with social events," said Beth Wells, senior.

Six and one-half hours a day, five days a week, the pressures of school were upon us, but the relief always came. At the end of these five days came what we all waited for: weekends, sport events to cheer at and social events to attend. "Weekends were made to go out with your friends," exclaimed Dan Walton, sophomore.

The weekends suddenly came to a halt and students were faced with agonizing over unfinished homework and the return of yet another grueling week of school.

Exchange students adjust to North

Despite differences in culture

Arriving in Redskin territory for the first time can be a little scary, but also exciting. Seven foreign exchange students found that out.

The new students represented several different cultures such as Belgium, Spain, and Japan.

Many differences were notices but quickly overcome, Marianne Dresse, from Belgium, came from a smaller school with a total of 200 students. She's grown accustomed to the large crowds at North Side, though. Her height of 6'2" is an advantage for her to be able to see through the hallways.

Jordi Canellas and Maria Alverez arrived from Spain. Jordi didn't waste any time before getting involved at North. He joined the cross-country team and also enjoys soccer. Most of North's students tried to get him to speak some Spanish, but little did they know his native language is Castillian. Maria was staying with relatives in Spain and came to the United States independently. While at North Side she has improved her English tremendously and plans to go to college when she returns home.

Of course we also enjoyed having students from our Sister City School, Koryo High School, in Japan. Junji Hirashima, Yumiko Horikawa, Minaki Tano, and Yumi Odawara each found differences, but much excitement made up for the confusion.

Junji took only a couple of hours to get accustomed to the American way, although his favorite food is still Japanese seaweed.

Yumiko, confused at first, settled down nicely in Fort Wayne. She wasn't totally new to North Side and its people. She had known Heather Williams, junior, from the past summer when Heather vacationed in Japan. Yumiko pursued many hobbies including art, drawing animals, and also playing softball.

Minako stayed with her aunt during her visit. She also grew to love the American way, especially Domino's pizza. Her hobbies include playing piano ever since she was five, track and field, and basketball.

Even though these students had some trouble with the language, customs of the people, and a new school, we can all say we enjoyed their stay in Fort Wayne and North Side High School.

by Angie Krouse and Nicole Schultz

"Ayyy!" Junji gives a thumbs up to his opinion of North Side life.

Yumiko Horikawa, senior, is caught by surprise.

The Gap

Sunday Jams

Or the movies

On Sunday nights from June to September, large groups of teenagers could be found at Lawton Park.

Why were they choosing to spend their Sunday nights there? "Because I like the music," according to Steve Taylor, sophomore. Steve says Lace was his favorite band at Lawton. Phil Michaeloff, sophomore, said he frequently went to Lawton because "there is nothing else to do on a Sunday night."

Not everyone felt positively about the 'Sunday Night Jams' as they were known. Maybe it was because of the large crowds or the humid night air. Kate Ronquest, junior, commented, "I only went once but I didn't enjoy myself. I'd rather stay home and watch 'Siskel and Ebert at the Movies'."

Most people however said they enjoyed hanging out at Lawton Park. Tino Talamantes, junior, exclaimed, "I like the atmosphere, the bands and definitely the girls!"

Whatever the reasons were for liking or disliking the jams, they did provide an interesting alternative to Siskel and Ebert.

by Angie Parrish

"Oh my gosh! Due today?," exclaims senior Kelli Kiefer.

Put if off Delay it

Why not wait until the end?

Panic! Five minutes before class begins. You're scurrying through notebook papers, frantically saying to yourself "Due Today? OH! I forgot! Now what was I suppose to do? I'm running out of time!," or just plain "HELP!"

Those familiar remarks came from the people who waited until the last minute to get things done. In other words those "Procrastinators." Not everyone considers that bad. "Procrastination? That's what I excel at!" exclaimed Helen Coufoudakis, senior.

If you have ever put off a research paper or any other important paper off until an hour before it is due, don't be alarmed; you're not alone. Everyone at sometime has procrastinated on something.

If by any chance, you happen to be one of those famous procrastinators, here are some helpful hints for kicking your bad habit.

One, you could just get it done and over with. Then you would have all that extra time to finish everything else you put off.

Second, you could also just do a little at a time. But it depends on your own style. "Procrastination, what is it? Well, I'll give you my answer later, OK?," asks Liz Inuoye.

Warm welcome helps ease fright

Many foreign students know

AFS was involved with such activities as the first home dance of the school year, sponsoring a booth at the neighborhood Halloween party and various potlucks throughout the year.

So how do you join? Just walk in! "I would encourage anyone to join," exclaimed Heather Williams, junior. It is a real unique way to get involved with North Side, and you can learn a lot while contributing to a project that benefits students."

Not only is AFS a fun and enjoyable club to be involved with, but it also brings the North Side circle closer together.

Being new to a school is never easy, but also being new to a country is frightening. With a club such as AFS to join, being new may tend to be a little less scary.

AFS is not just for foreign exchange students. Anybody can join. Anyone in a foreign language class or interested in making new friends and having fun while being involved with their school is welcomed.

What exactly is AFS? For foreign exchange students, American Field Service is learning about North Side, its teachers, and its students.

Redskins do best

Spell Bowl was the high school equivalent to a grammar school spelling bee. The sixteen member team competed in New Haven last September in their second year of Spell Bowl competition. During the contest each member received a word from the "emcee" and attempted to spell it. At the end of ten rounds the scores were tallied with teams receiving one point for each correct spelling. North earned 45 points which was enough to put them in first place for Division I teams. Prior to competition each speller received a list of 1000 words and was expected to know them backwards and forwards. They practiced every day before and after school which, in the opinion of Mrs. Kathy Neuhaus, the club sponsor, greatly improved the teams performance. "We should really have an excellent team next year," she commented, "because seven of these people will be competing again."

OEA helps futures

Teaches important office skills

Office Education Association is a program offered to help students decide on a general business career through on-the-job training.

OEA dealt with such office skills as computer processing, business, marketing, and accounting skills.These helped the students get accepted for the jobs which they applied for.

Mrs. Sandy Macy, sponsor, said, "There has been a decrease in participation this year, but with our plans for next year, we hope to see it rise again." The lack of participation did not cut down on the goals though. OEA participated in a muscular dystrophy fundraiser, as well as regional, state, and national contests to test their office skills.

SADD aims high

Promotes good attitudes

Some think that drinking and driving is one of the biggest mistakes you could make.

Tracy Butler, SADD member said, "I think SADD is for a good cause. If people are going to drink and drive they will end up killing someone else or dying themselves. If there was anyway to stop them I would."

SADD is a group of 45 students who promote the purpose of mothers against drunk driving. It started four years ago by students who felt that they could influence other students better than adults could. The SADD program cooperated the prom and graduation all four years and the lockout for the past two years. Mr. Morris said, "I decided to sponsor S.A.D.D. because I have had students involved in dumb, drunk driving accidents and felt that it was time to do something about it."

Telethons Helped

Service not key collecting

Key Club was not for people to collect keys to get the big golden key to Fort Wayne. Instead it was a service organization that provided help for people in need.

The Key Club helped in different telethons like Muscular Dystrophy. The members also scheduled times to go to retirement homes and to state hospitals to do things and help the patients there.

The Key Club not only helped the needy public, they also had another important job. Key Club produced The Key every year. Will Rudolph, Key Club member, said, "I joined because I enjoy helping out people in need."

Afro Club grows with talent show

Epps enjoys involved year

The Afro-Club was a successful organization with about 20 regular members. They made plans for things such as nursing home visits and other things in the community. They also sponsored a dance, with Chris Didier of WMEE. As a fund-draiser, they sold photo albums. Mrs. Lizzie Epps, club sponsor commented that the club did not have a large overhead and often ended up with funds left over for activities for the members such as a Cedar Point trip. The Afro-Club's big project was the fashion-talent show, a big production that required a lot of planning and work.

"I enjoyed working with the students. I liked to see them put their talent to work in things like the talent show," said Mrs. Epps.

Leadership in use

Grants offered to the needy.

Project LEAD teaches students leadership skills by creating volunteer projects. Stacey Wood, junior, said "I like it because it gave me a chance to be with my friends, and I have proved to myself that I can be a great leader."

The club, which has been around since 1982, has already given eight different grants to help local community agencies.

Organizations such as Matthew 25, Association for Retarded Citizens, Day Break, a Montressori school, and Habitate for Humanity had an opportunity to receive a grant for their needs.

These grants are provided to Project LEAD from a program called Youth as Resources, which is funded by the Lilly Endowment.

Students themselves had to make the decision about who was worthy enough to receive the grant.

"I thought it would help students to understand how they can use leadership, and then they can put it to use in the outside world," commented Mr. Orvil Schlatter, sponsor.

Through Project LEAD students found out the true meaning of leadership, and have matured in helping everyone around them.

'Feet of the office'

Service workers invaluable

We all waited for the day when that little pink or green slip handed to our teacher was for us. What most of us did not realize however, was the invaluable service that the students who delivered the messages provided for North Side.

The service workers were the "feet of the office," claimed Mrs. Betty Wagner, attendance clerk. Indeed, without these students, the attendance and the messages would not get out on time.

What were some of the advantages offered to service workers? "All the parties and free food provided for us, or simply the chance to relax during classes," joked Shelly Krouse, senior.

John Amos, junior, liked being a gym helper because, "Sometimes you have time for your homework. It is also fun to tell people what to do!"

Council involved;

Helpful service major goal

The student council was the school's governing body, with representatives from each class. The members were always elected in May and then inducted in a change-over ceremony. Mrs. Jackie French, sponsor, has been involved in Student Council for five years and has really enjoyed it.

"It is the most enjoyable part of my job," commented Mrs. French. She went on to say that the council tried to find ways to get students interested and feel proud of North.

The council was busy all year, even in the summer. Meetings were held to make decisions and form committees for Homecoming. They began by establishing a theme and sponsored the homecoming dance, the bonfire, and the powder puff game, and they awarded the peace pipe at the end of spirit week.

The four council officers attended leadership seminars at Indiana University, where they learned speaking and listening skills.

Council met during the school day which was a definite improvement over past years. Through this system, every member could attend the meetings without interfering with 7 a.m. class or after school activities.

One of the main purposes of the council was community service. they sponsored numerous fundraisers, including dances, carnation sales during Valentines day, and powder puff. All of the money went toward their community service projects. For example, all proceeds from powder puff went toward the annual Halloween party for local children. Other projects included collecting canned goods for the needy, toys for tots, and money for the United Way. One of the main attractions was the fact that members could do things for their school.

"It is really neat because we get to get involved," commented Ashley Couch and Liz Adams, sophomore class representatives.

Interest continues

Helicon returns after absence

After a five year absence, the English-based Helicon has returned to the North side scene. The absence was due to the need for new direction and modernization. "The students just lost interest," adds Mrs. Susan Boesch, who, along with Mrs. Kathy Neuhaus, was the Helicon sponsor.

The club was open to all junior and senior honors English students and a few sophomores who were recommended by their English teachers. Helicon sponsored a sophomore introduction, a mini notepad sale, novel presentations, and a trip to Stratford, Canada.

Melacyn Turner, president, said, "I like being president because I can relate to my fellow honors classmates. I love to be a leader, and being in this role can strengthen my leadership qualities."

"Even though this first year was a little slow, I feel that participation will increase in the future, enabling the club to further expand its horizons," said Cristy Gumpp, junior.

Team speaks out

Speakers gain recognition

You are standing in front of a group of millions. Your hands are cold and sweaty, and you feel like your knees could give out anytime. You look up and try to envision the crowd stark naked . . .

These are the feelings and thoughts shared by many of the speakers that compete on the speech team. Mrs. Myers says, "Most people are generally nervous and scared when they have to speak in front of the crowd. Very few are confident." But there are those who enjoy getting in front of a crowd and sharing their ideas and feelings.

For those who are gratified by this exchange of ideas, there is the speech team. They come together on the average of three Saturdays every month to compete against each other at area high schools. The speakers, as they are called, have three separate rounds. Then the people with the lowest scores compete in a final round, and it is from this round that the competitors are ranked. Ribbons are usually awarded for the top eight speakers in every event.

The speaker's performances, earn points for the school and help to then earn sweepstakes. The school with the most sweepstake points receives a trophy. The process takes several hours, often from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

With the grueling schedule it is a wonder that people chose to compete in speech. Some participants are on the team to meet people, while others get a lot of satisfaction from competing at something they are good at. Mrs. Myers thoroughly enjoys teaching the group, saying, "I believe in it, and I would like to pass this on to the people I teach."

Learn for future:

Run a successful business; DECA promotes future

For students in DECA, the basic philosophy was to develop future leaders in marketing and management. "I think the most important thing they learned was a better appreciation of the business community and how it functions," Mr. Mike Danley, sponsor, said. DECA stands for Distributive Education clubs of America, but the guideline was based upon Marketing Education.DECA has been involved in several activities such as selling T-shirts and spirit hands to support and represent the spirit at North Side. DECA has also offered a doughnut shot for anyone who might have been too rushed for breakfast. Doing this helped the students in DECA get a feel of what it was like to do such things in the real business community.

Peers facilitated

Taught students about growth

They jump up and down. They do stretches and breathing exercises. They are Peer Facilitators.

Peer Facilitators is a program to train students to communicate effectively, to care about other students and to facilitate growth. Those who wanted to be accepted in this program talked to Mrs. Klocke after they had received teacher or peer recommendation. They met on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays at 7 o'clock in the morning.

Their activities included mini-psychology classes, practice in experimental activities, learning how to listen, discovering how people behave and why they behave the way they do and learning how to make certain decisions.

For example, Peers wore red tags, meaning "loveable" and "capable." When anyone criticized a peer, that person tore off a corner of the tag. If someone said positive things, the peer would put a check mark on the tag. This was to show what happens on the inside when one is insulted or receives compliments.

Mrs. Klocke said, "This group was tremendously a good group. I felt really good about them."

Mrs. Klocke watches on as peers get together and do one of their early morning exercises.

Fall play success

Myers: one of my best jobs

"Sabrina Fair" was the story of a girl who went to Paris to try to find what she wanted out of life. When she returned to the United States, everything had changed, and people didn't think she was a sophisticated as she considered herself to be.

"This particular play was chosen because it was different than any play put on here yet," said Mrs. Claryn Myers, director. "It was a sophisticated comedy."

A cast and crew of about twenty-five students devoted six weeks of their time for planning and rehearsals. "Practices seemed extremely long this year. Maybe it was just me, but they were difficult, and we had to learn our lines fast," commented Dale Raypole, junior.

The play was a success with an audience turnout of about 600 people. Mrs. Myers said, "For me personally, it was one of my best jobs. I had a sophisticated group of students to work with, and they made it an enjoyable experience."

Schroeder leads in points

The hockey club was much improved in their second year of play; although, many people in school didn't know much about it, and they had only a few loyal fans.

"It would be nice if more people would come to our games," commented Steve Schroeder, junior. The club played their games on Tuesday nights at McMillen Ice Arena, sometimes as late as 9:30 p.m. They shared the division with Snider, Northrop, Homestead, New Haven, and Bishop Dwenger.

Hockey was expensive for the players. They had to furnish their own equipment. Although practices were few, the team had to pay for ice time.

State tournament play for hockey began in February. It was split into three divisions according to the strength of the participants' records. The team traveled to Indianapolis for competition in division II, with high hopes. Leading the team in points for the year was captain Shawn Schroeder, senior.

RSA popular; Committee formed

Area cleaned up by self-policing students

Our outside area that had become a disgrace was resaved by the RSA.

This was the first year for the RSA committee, a group of students that cleaned it up and kept it neat. This group of students, directed by Mr. John Bierbaum, was concerned over the possibility of losing the RSA, where hanging around had become a popular pastime. Last year school administration decided to ban students from gathering in the RSA because of what was called unacceptable behavior. Students who frequented the area volunteered to be self-policing in order to keep this sort of thing from happening. They then formed the committee and have been very successful in keeping the RSA an acceptable part of North Side.

Night held activities

Lockout II meets goals

Tickets were sold to 621 students for a full night of dancing, volleyball, basketball, swimming, movies, and pizza. Where would one find such a place with all these activities for only $3? . . . at the SADD Lockout II.

Sponsored by SADD, Project Lead and Student Council, the lockout was described as "a time in which we, the students, could just relax and enjoy ourselves" by Holly LaVigne, senior.

Planning for the second lockout started in October, but the "real action started in December," explained Mr. Morris." He added, "It was a group effort this time with a lot of people helping."

Among the many activities planned, an hour-long film showing the disastrous effects of drinking and driving was presented to the students. The film was donated by Continental Cars.

All in all, Mr. Morris feels "that the kids had a great time. We (the organizations sponsoring the lockout) accomplished many of our goals!"

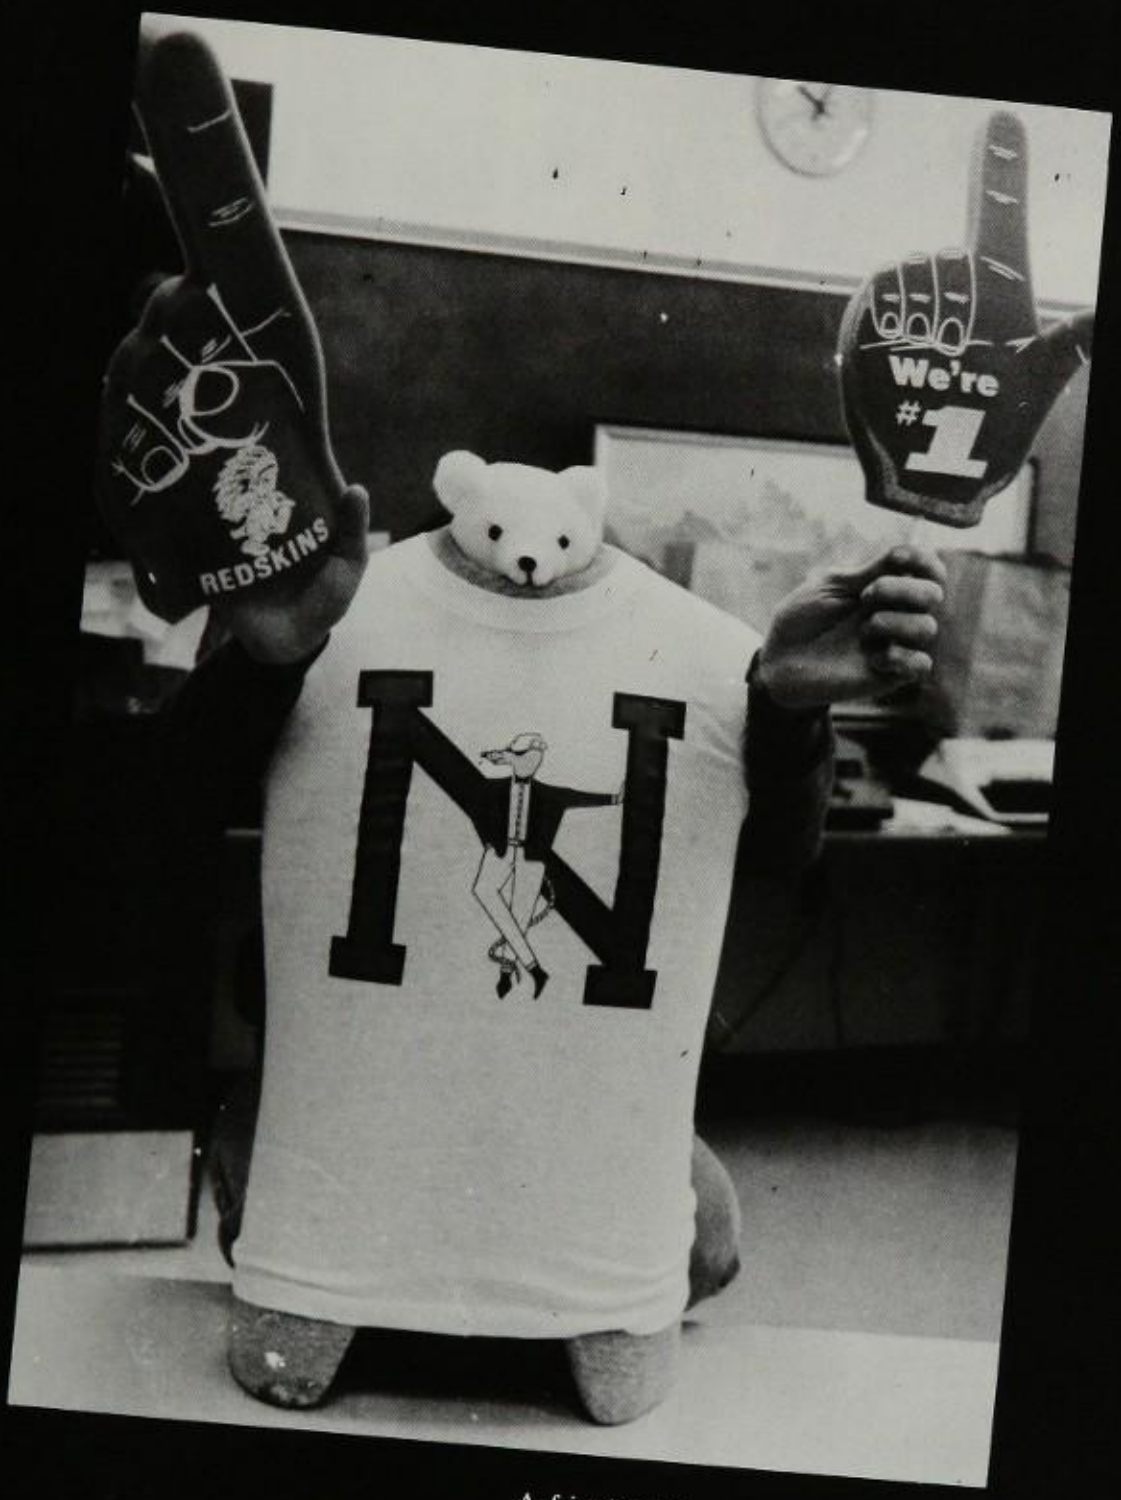
OOPS!!



A friendly helper, John Godfrey, senior, displays some items that DECA has sold this year.

DECA tries to promote items

Oops! DECA overbought! Don't be a dummy; come to the donut shop and satisfy your tummy! These are just a couple of sayings from DECA that almost every student can relate to.

Many spirit towels, shirts, hands, headbands (spirit boppers), Christmas candles, bells, chocolate candies, saltwater taffy, and donuts every morning (whew!) were sold by DECA. Of these many items there are still many spirit hands and shirts left over that "will have to be sold next year to make any profit," explained Mr. Danley, DECA sponsor.

Most of the money from fundraisers goes toward the conference in which DECA members compete. In the fall ten members went to a leadership conference in Chicago which took about $1,200 of their funds. The rest of the profits are saved for supplementary materials for the DECA class.

Although DECA has put forth all efforts to sell all their leftover items, Mr. Danley hopes to have some more promotional items to sell to students to keep the awareness of DECA alive.

With Christmas in the past, come get your DECA donuts while they last.
They are on sale every morning 7:15-7:55 a.m.

Spectrum expands

Mix of musical talent flows

The music department played a melody of success. Marching Band completed their season by placing 7th in state. "To make it to state and be in the top ten is a pretty hard goal to attain," said Mr. Ed King, director.

Concert band, composed of sophomores, juniors, and seniors; varsity band, composed of freshmen; and rehearsal band, a jazz ensemble; played three concerts here. Rehearsal band also played at the ISSMA Contest last April. It is basically training for Wild Siders. All you have to do to be part of it is tryout. The Wildsiders played the most difficult music they could find, according to Mr.King. The band won a contest in South Bend and played for Mayor Paul Helmke's inauguration.

"They are a really good group," added Mr. King.

In the choir room a new voice was added. Mrs. Betty McKee began teaching A Cappella, Troubadors and ATJ. She also started a swing choir called A Wave Of Distinction. All groups attended the ISSMA choir contest.

In Arrowettes the captains spent a great deal of time making up their own routines. "I feel that as a captain it is my responsibility to get the routine ready to teach," said Connie Roy, junior.

"Orchestra played very difficult music, but the group handled it well," said Mr. Larry Kenner.

They also worked on the musical, "Bye Bye Birdie," which is professional level music, the same music they would play on Broadway if doing this show. All in all, every group in the music department had reason to celebrate success.

New musical group flows through halls

'Wave' excites members

A giant wave gushed through the choir room. No, there wasn't a flood that no one knew about, it was A Wave of Distinction, the new swing choir.

The beginning of this ensemble was brought courtesy of Mrs. Betty McKee, choir director. "I had worked with a lot of the students here (when I taught) in middle school and I knew there was a lot of talent and interest in this area," said Mrs. McKee.

About 75 students auditioned. "(They) were really excited to get the chance to be in a swing choir," said Mrs. McKee. She felt this was a fun idea and it was like starting where she left off with some of the kids.

The name, A Wave of Distinction, was chosen from a list of many others that the students had thought of. The group liked the name because it sounded "classy."

The swing choir performed at school concerts and at the ISSMA concert choir contest.

Academics

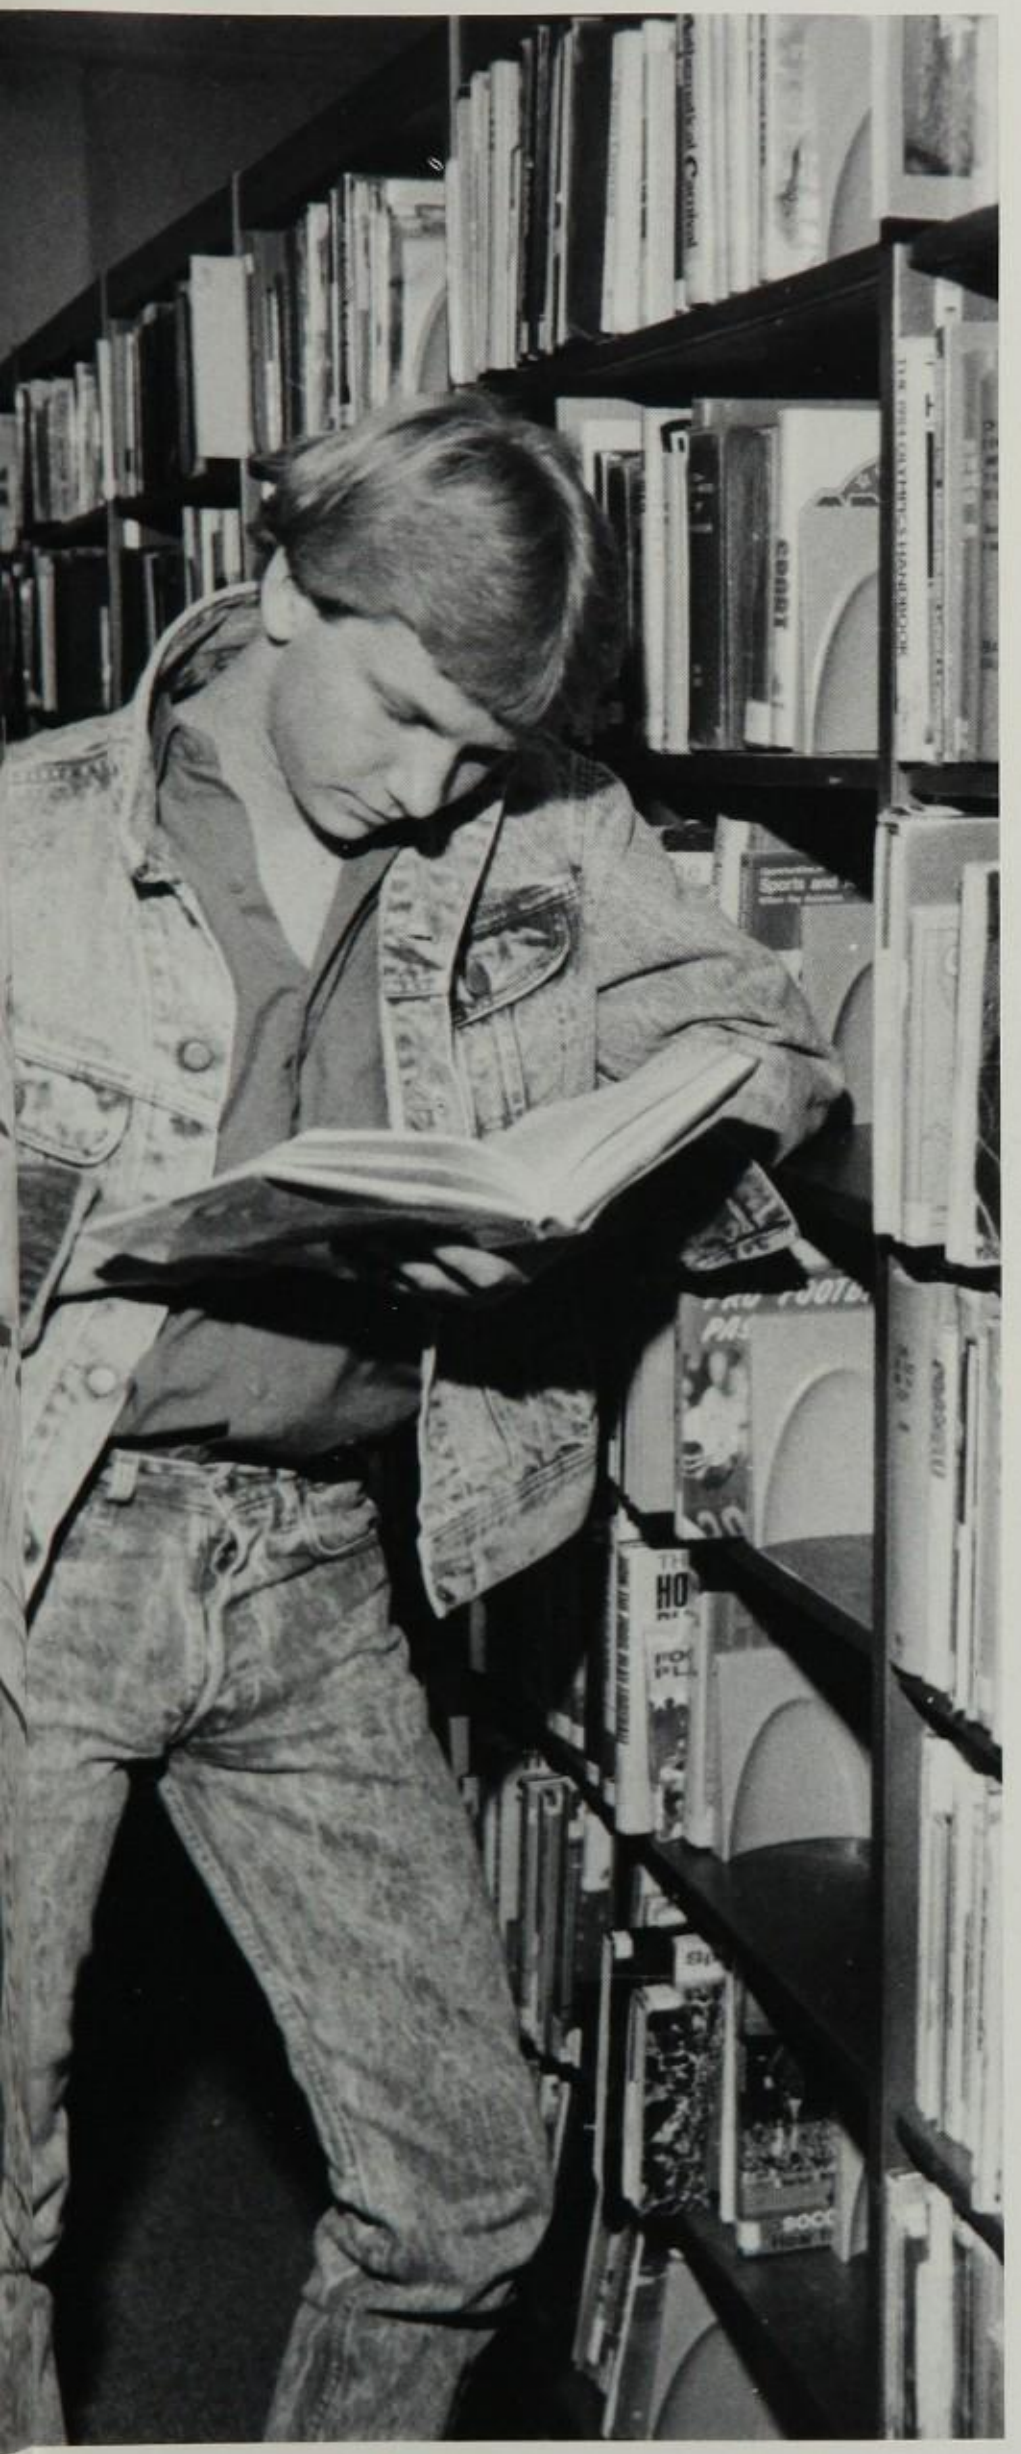
Industrial Arts requires lots of hard labor. Tim Enquist, junior, puts the sander to use on one of his projects.



Measurement is an important concept in Chemistry. Jenny McFadden and Tiffany Felger learn to use the scale during one of their lab assignments.

Displays in the main hall often attract much interest. Tim Langmeyer and Andy Sarrel, seniors, admire the constitution in this display.

Style adds flair

Techniques feature English; Bulletin boards tell the story

English has changed in more ways than one, from decorating the rooms, to changing students' changed attitudes towards English.

Teachers made the department different by putting excitement in classrooms. Bulletin boards were more colorful and teachers even drew on the overhead.

"I see an improved attitude towards English, a desire and willingness to learn, and more mature students" said Miss Patricia Reilly, English teacher.

"I really liked Miss Reilly as an English teacher. She was very unique. She always had a story of her own that related to the story we were reading," said David Rohr, senior.

Audrey Snyder, junior, added, "English was good and bad at times. It all depends on what teacher you had, and what activities were planned."

Of the eighteen English teachers, seven were part-time, including Mrs. Sandra Grabler, who had four classes; Mrs. Linda Gererdot, two; Mrs. Betty McKee, one; and Mr. John Maloy; three. The regular part-time teachers were Mrs. Linda Frick and Mrs. Bonnie Outman, both with three classes.

Honors English provides yet another frustrating moment for Jeff Hagerman, junior.

Science inspires; work is difficult
College-bound load up

Going above and beyond their requirements many students took extra science classes over the four-credit minimum. This in itself was impressive for college applications. "I took an extra year because I'm going to college. Science can help in any field. You can't get too much science!" said Jennise Jennings, senior.

There were a variety of classes for students to choose from — advanced classes all the way to basic courses. There was a science class custom-made for everyone, including those who did not have enough time in their regular daily schedules. Seven a.m. classes were designed for people like that. The only trick was getting up bright and early.

Experiments and projects were abundant in the science department as well as rats, mice, and chemical odors. Advanced biology students did experiments on lab animals, drew a conclusion, and wrote a report on their findings. Chemistry students mixed, matched, and guessed names of chemicals.

Students liked and disliked these experiments for several reasons.

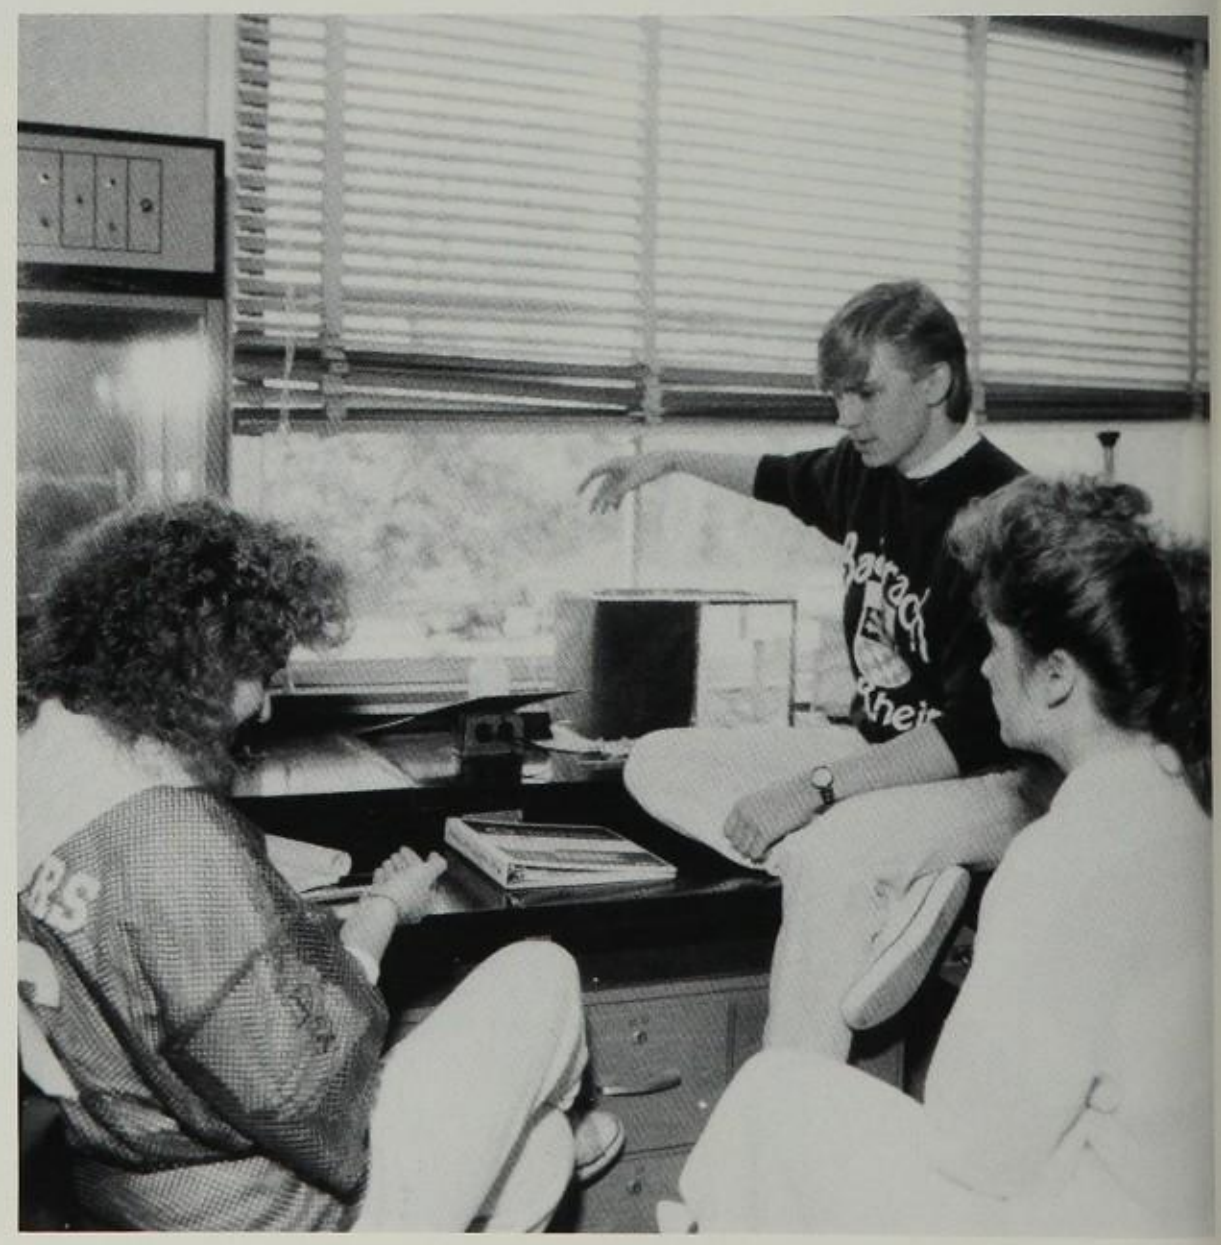
Chemistry is a fascinating subject. Matt Ladd and Lara Headlee watch an experiment carefully.

Microscopes are a very useful tool for young scientists. Michael Deming and Cynthia Bingen, seniors, work on their lab assignment.



Lab work is often done in groups. Beth Wells, Chris Grinstead, and Ina Ingram, seniors, discuss one of their problems.

Science offers much opportunity to students. Mike Smotherman, senior, Jamie Fish, junior, and Phil LaSalle, senior, change the cages of their lab animals.

Lab assignments are often very complicated in Mr. Lewis' classes. This group needs his assistance to answer one of the many difficult questions.

Lovell: North 'best'
Math offerings top others

The courses offered by the math department were no different than those offered by other schools, but high caliber teaching provided for an excellent program. Mr. Bob Lovell, department chairman, said, "Having been in other schools in the area, I know that North Side has the best program." Algebra, geometry, general math and finite math were all offered.

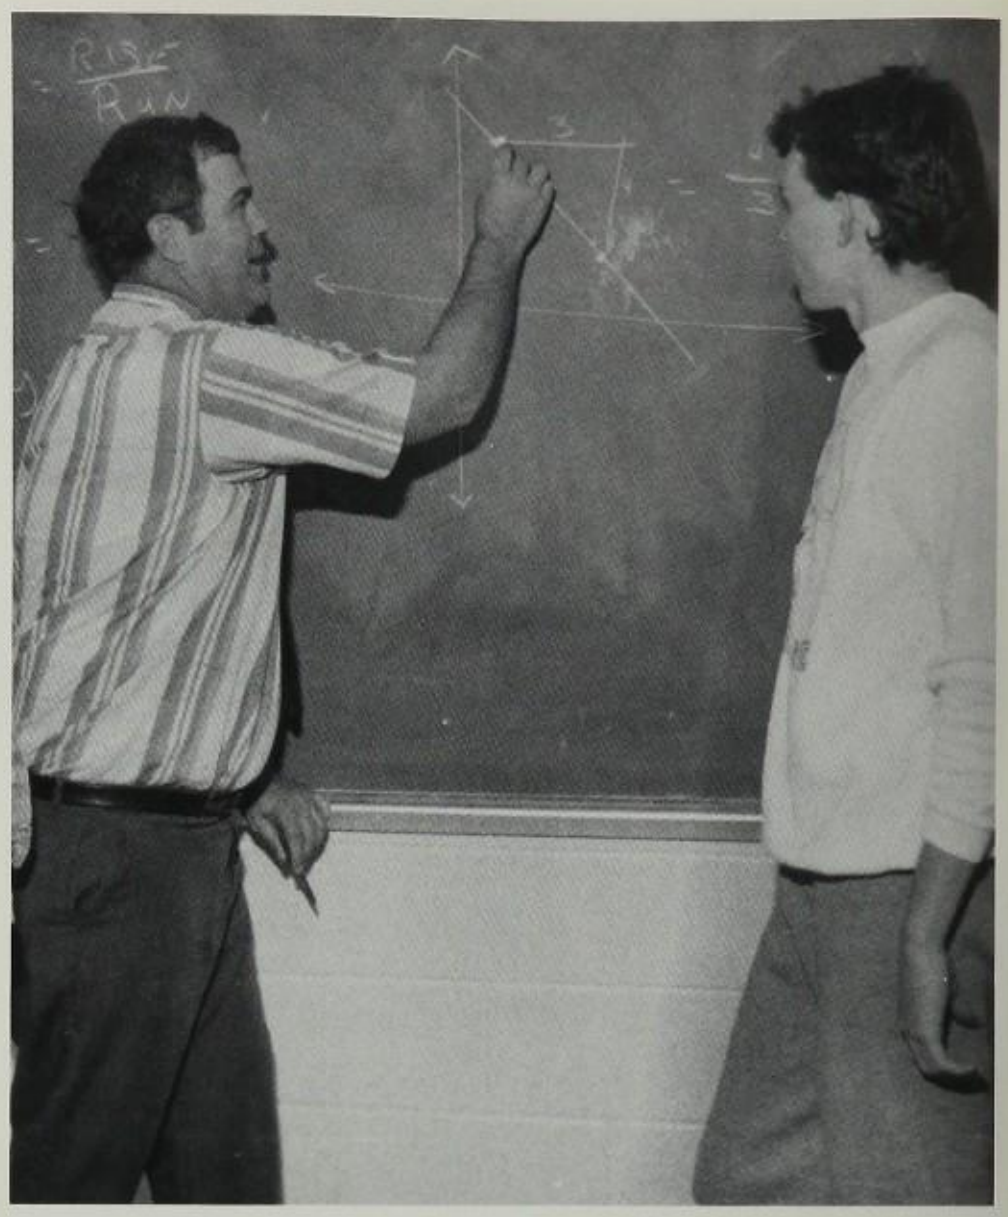
Mr. Lovell kept math interesting for his students. He brought games and brain teasers to keep his class from becoming boring. He said he tries to keep things loose, and he tries not take things too seriously.

"He's an educational experience!" exclaimed Amy McComb, junior.

Mr. By Hey, math teacher, noted that each math class was different. Some classes picked the material up quickly, and some had to work harder at it. Mr. Hey's techniques included use of the overhead during lecture and many dittos. He commented that his more advanced classes were challenged by a greater number of quizzes.

"I try to keep it fun knowing that not all of the students will like my class," said Mr. Hey.

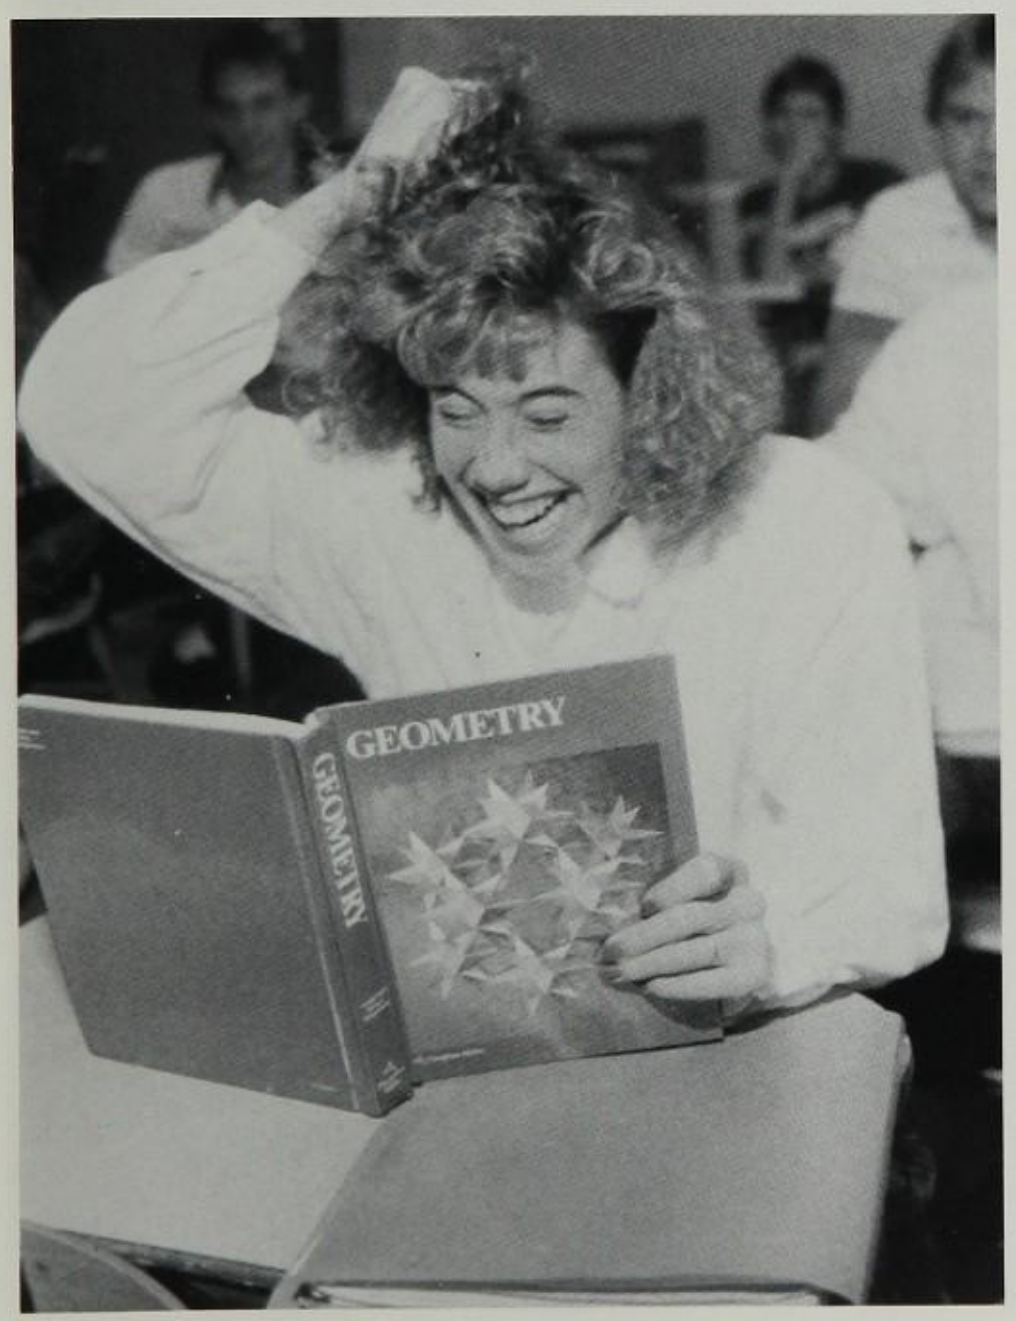
By Steve Lyng



Juniors who take advanced algebra often need a detailed explanation of their assignment. Mr. Hunter explains graphing to Seth Sheridan, junior.

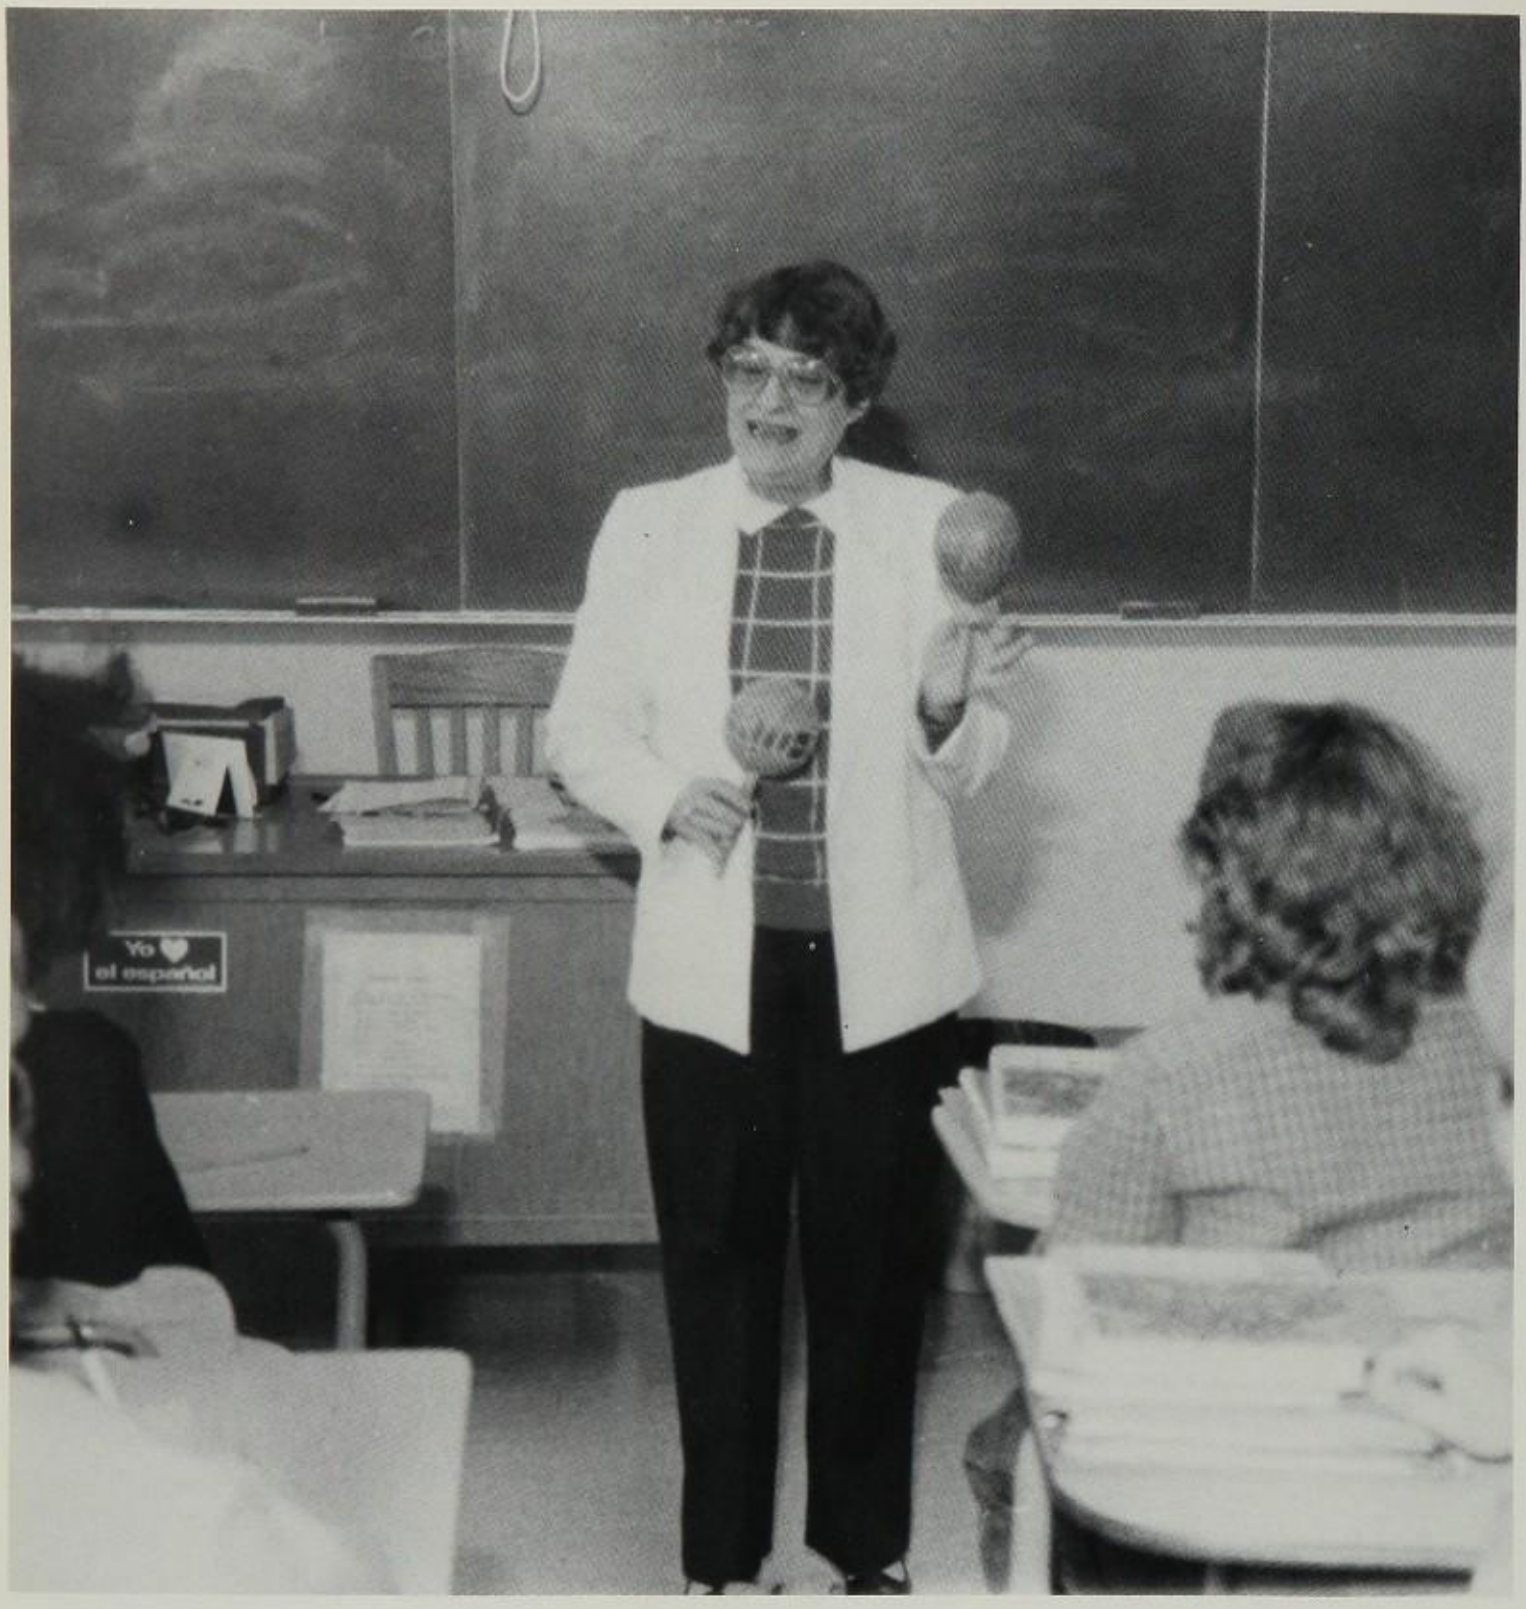
Geometry is a very complex subject. Mr. Bierbaum explains the proof for congruent triangles to Amanda Lutz, sophomore.

Most freshmen exhibit acute interest in Mr. Merkle's classes. This particular class is interested in his explanation of their next assignment.



Math is sometimes very frustrating. Jessica Ellenwood, "pulls her hair out" over an assignment in geometry.

The overhead is a useful tool for Mr. Merkle. He uses it to explain an equation on the next assignment to Quinn Duffy, freshman.



Showing the proper techniques on the maracas, Mrs. Herrero gives the class a demonstration.

Since he did not understand the Greek hero Jason, Mrs. Rithermiller explains it to Nick Weber, junior.

World opens wide

Language enriches, brightens the lives of hopeful travelers

Foreign languages opened a totally new and different field to the participating student. Besides learning to speak the language, the students also learned about the country, its people, its customs, and daily life.

French, Spanish, German, Latin, and Japanese were offered, giving students a wide variety to choose from.

"Foreign languages are important to the universal world. They can teach the student so much about that country," said Mrs. Donna Riethmiller.

Teaching methods varied from teacher to teacher, but the 2002 program seemed to agree with all teachers. It offered students active participating in critical thinking skills, and was very effective.

"I really liked German. It's like no other language," said Dean Kessler, sophomore.

Like the teachers, students also thought it was important to learn a different language.

Sheila Horner, junior, commented, "I enjoyed taking French. I hope it will benefit me because I plan on traveling to France in future years."

Bicentennial sets a chord of interest

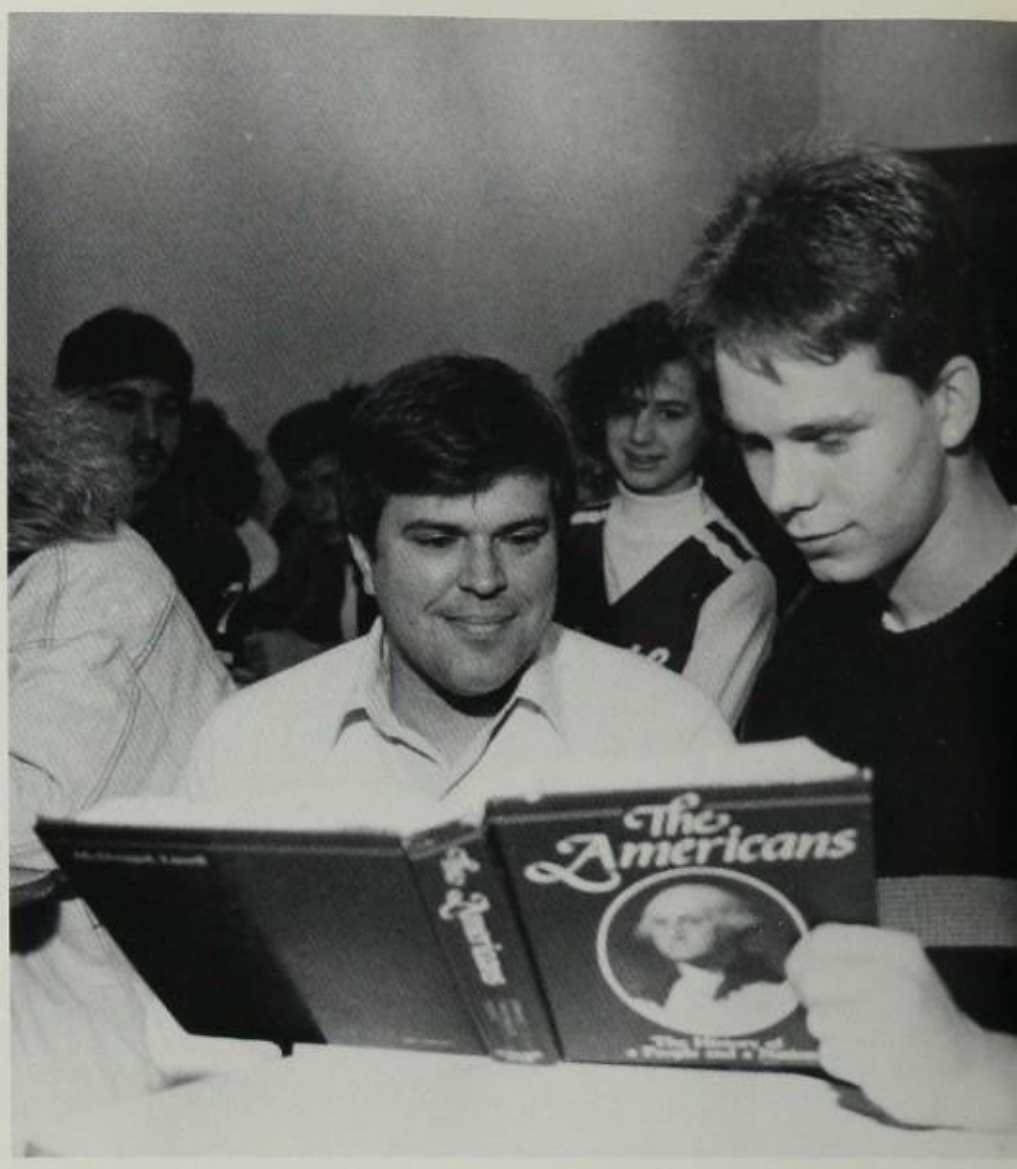
Projects focus Constitution

Imagine having newspapers which were censored, or not being able to speak freely. Picture having to give up your house to soldiers who wished to live there. All of these thoughts might have been a reality if the Constitution of the United States had not been signed 200 years ago. History classes did special projects centering around the bicentennial of the Constitution. Students noted the publicity given to the anniversary. "I'm glad I observed the bicentennial coverage because it is important to know what the United States is based on," said Tiffany Leason, junior.

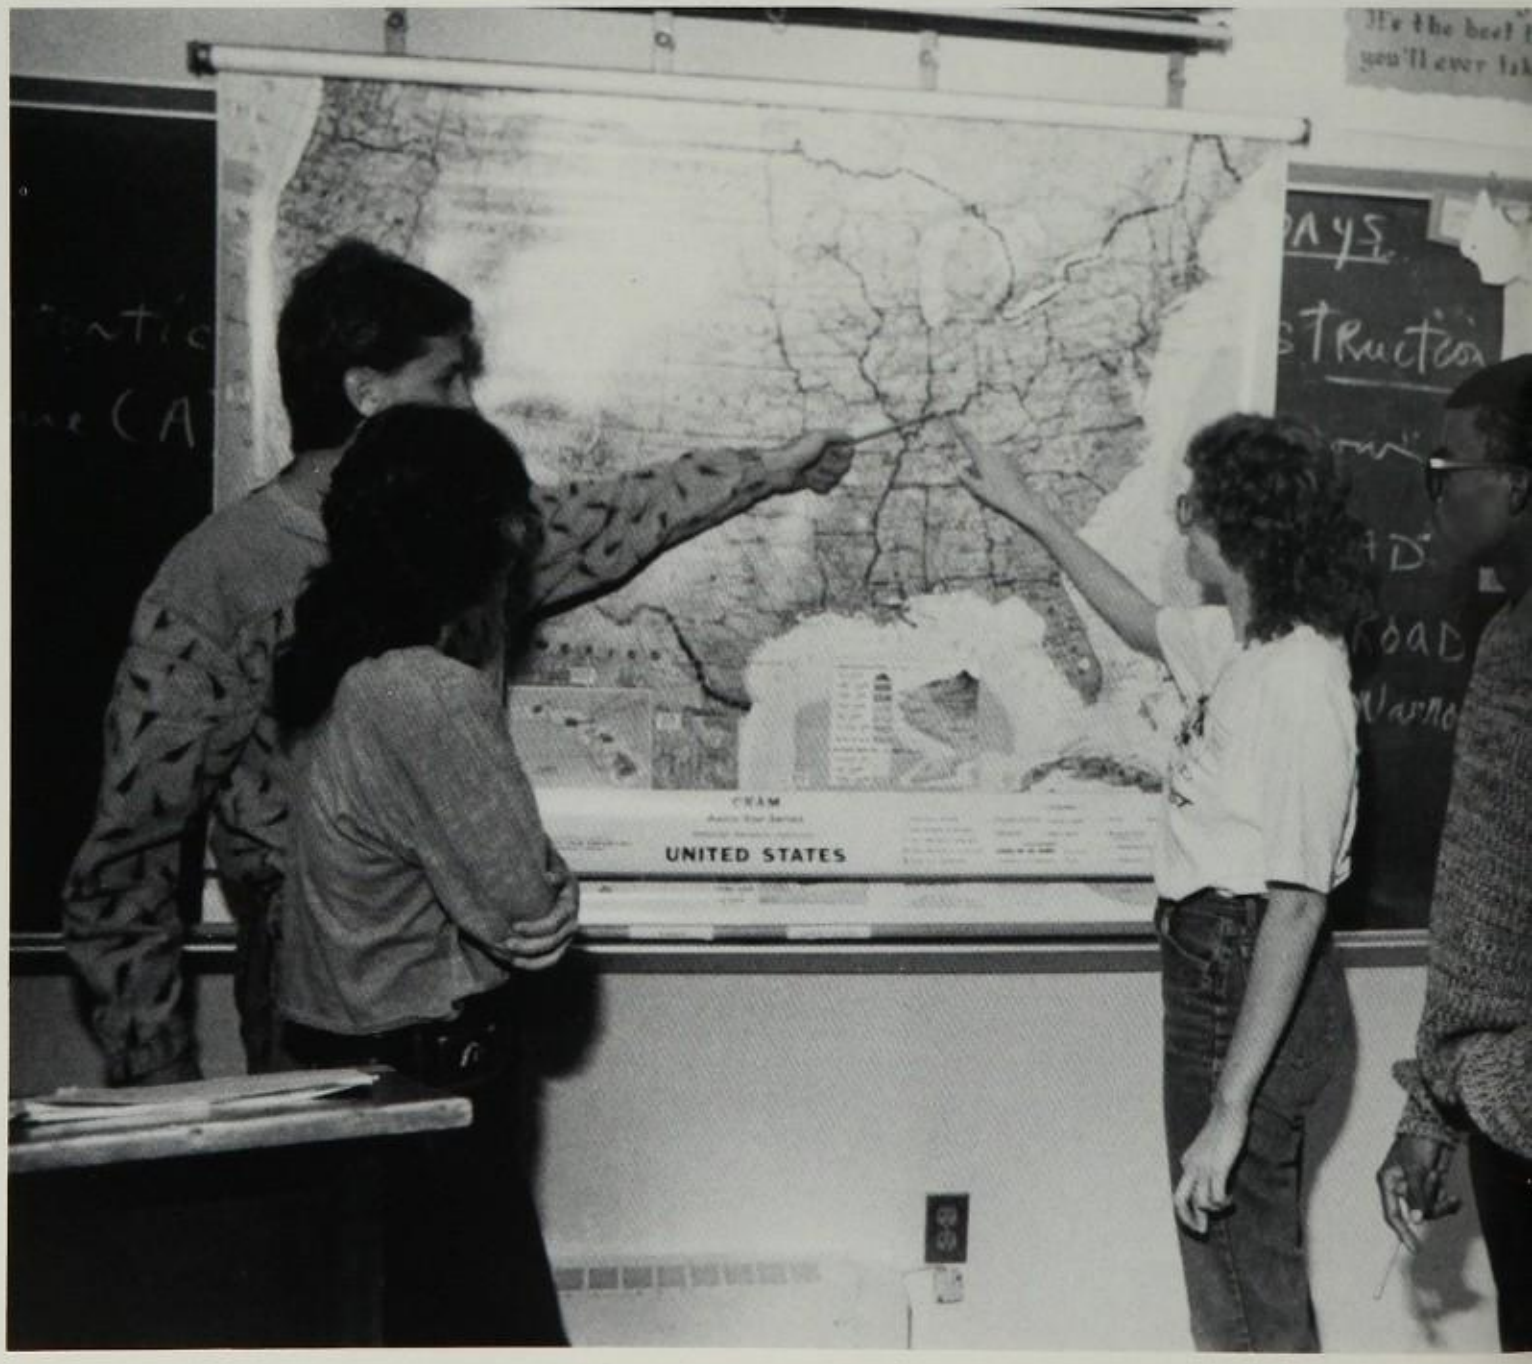
Classes offered in the Social Studies department include, psychology, sociology, government, and economics, which was a requirement for seniors beginning this year. Erik Burgess, senior, said, "I think it is important that high school graduates know about the way our economy and government work. If you have the right to vote, you should have some knowledge about why you are voting. It does make it difficult to take the classes that we want though."

Mr. Don Evans, head of the department feels students need history because "It prepares them for voting and other duties as a citizen, and students learn to make personal decisions and have respect for various points of view and cultures."

by Pam Bryers



Mr. Schnelker appreciates the interest as he reviews history with Mark Arnold, junior.



Shawn Babcock and Patty High, juniors, point out the southern border of Indiana to classmates Susie Klopfenstein and Joe Flake.

Mr. Omerad's economics class takes notes on his lecture about the money matters of the world.

Mock libel trial put on

Anniversary of constitution

A special project in journalism was a mock libel trial for the anniversary of the Constitution. Some English and social studies classes participated too.

There were four basic levels in journalism: basic, the Northerner staff, the Legend staff, and advanced journalism. Students were required to learn the basics of the news story, the feature story, editing, layout, and law. Northerner and Legend staffs were expected to produce two stories a week. Advanced journalism students worked on their own time, before and after school. Students in advanced classes worked on their individual assignments, rather than in a group.

Keeping busy first
Fast production seeks to inform

Busy bodies everywhere, like rush hour traffic, hurried to meet their deadline. The Northerner staff worked frantically. "What I expected from the staff was for them to do their best and to meet their deadlines," Miss Norma Thiele commented.

The number of Northerner subscriptions was higher this year than last year. "I hoped the North Siders would look to the Northerner as a place to help them find information and as a place to learn and understand," said Miss Thiele. Those who received the Northerner subscriptions knew that they were packed with easy to understand information.

"The Northerner was a good newspaper, but there was always room for improvement, such as more room to do what is creative," Miss Thiele stated.

The plan for the year was to put out 32 issues of the Northerner and make each one better than the one before.

The Legend staff received two Apple IIGS computers which they learned to use to help produce the Legend. Fifteen hundred students subscribed, more than even before.

They had to work quickly. "Literally what the Legend staff did was to write a 160-page book. The staff did a fine job. They had to work as they learned," said Miss Thiele.

The staff also assisted during picture taking, They handled it well. "It went smoothly with no problems," Miss Thiele comments.

The plan for the year is to put out the best yearbook possible.

Throughout the year the staff worked on layouts, cropped pictures, and wrote copy. Their reward — the yearbook.

Business classes:
More groups, fewer teachers, same amount of career choices

Eight hundred fifty students attended one or more of the sixteen classes offered by the business department. The enrollment went down approximately fifty students from previous years. The business application teachers taught various classes throughout the year because there were only seven teachers for sixteen classes, but this did not really create a problem. Business students got assignments just like other students. The only exception were typing students; their assignments had to be completed in class.

Most people took a business course to learn a skill subject and to choose a business career. Therefore Mr. Keith Fisher, department head, and other business teachers had a special project in mind to recruit future students.

These students learn how to type, which is very helpful in many ways.

DECA prepares students for future
Members compete, train

Leadership development, social intelligence, civic consciousness, vocational understanding, school spirit, and togetherness were the main point of emphasis in DECA.

Fund-raisers were a must. The money raised from the projects went for sending students to competition for marketing education.

Last November for example, Mr. Danley, DECA teacher, and some of his students went to the central regional competition in Chicago. "That cost us close to $1200," said Mr. Danley.

Fifty students were enrolled in the three marketing education or distributive education classes. Individual officers were chosen in the three classes.

These offerings helped students prepare for the business world and the career chances in their future. "DECA leads students to experience on-the-job training and to see the working world as it really is," commented Peter Carlson, senior.

Variety challenges;
Offerings attract interest

Industrial Arts projects were not just exercises out of a book. Most of the projects made in Industrial Arts were useful items.

"It's pretty fun, we do some neat things," said Shane Schroeder, junior.

Industrial Arts was a challenge. Many students came in knowing very little but left knowing how to use most of the equipment in their respective classes. Industrial Arts was no blow-off either. Students had to work hard and pay attention. Mr. Jon Bill, department head kept all of his students involved.

"They learn by doing," he said.

Students were attracted to Industrial Arts for various reasons. Some enrolled to learn skills for a future career or for satisfying a curiosity.

"Industrial Arts are neat classes that teach you things you can use in later life," commented James Cain, senior.

Mr. Bill added that the students' projects usually do very well in the Indiana Industrial Education Association contest, which is a statewide competition, involving up to 800 projects in all areas of Industrial Arts.

RVS helps trainees with career choices

Future brightens with practice

One hundred thirty-five North Side students spent one-half of each day at Regional Vocational School. Some chose either morning or afternoon classes as juniors and seniors because they were not planning on going on to college. They did have set goals for the future, though, and were career-oriented.

Others chose RVS to help them in college. Felicia Greene, junior, said, "I'm in computer accounting because I want to be in accounting and it will also help me in business college."

Because an abundance of students applied to attend RVS, not all of them got their first choice of classes. North Side sent fifteen more students than last year.

Classes ranged from child and health careers to construction and automotive fields. Most juniors were taught from books an in classes, while seniors also experienced on-the-job training. Students earned three credits per semester for the program.

More student activities and student seminars characterized this year. A student senate was also added. "It's like a student council, but at RVS," said Mrs. Pat Anthis, assistant director.

Students found attendance more important there. "If you miss a day, you get way behind," said Tina Eberle, junior. Transportation was not a problem. If students did not have their own ride, a school bus was always there to deliver them to their destination.

For those students who needed classes which were not offered at North Side, RVS was a valuable addition to their education.

Drama skill helps
Young actors fulfill fantasy

Standing in front of a class acting out a scene is more fun than most people think.

The majority of drama students like doing scenes better than doing other projects that are covered in drama class. " commented Mrs. Claryn Myers, drama teacher. However Keith Conti said, "I like the pantomimes better, as opposed to doing improvisations, because I don't have to speak in them."

Mrs. Myers said, "Not only do I like to cover the basics in drama but I also like to go through the background, which includes doing units of literature, makeup and costume."

Mrs. Myers said "students like to act because it is a fantasy world. It gives them a chance to do or be whatever they can't be in real life.

Let thoughts flow
Scraps, pieces soon form art

Take a moment . . . empty your thoughts, relax your mind. These might be some things that artists might say to themselves before they start one of their projects.

Ordinary paper, canvas, even a little piece of string could contain inner thoughts and dreams. The certain shapes, various shades of colors enter your mind as you observe your surroundings. When wanting or needing to express your feelings there is always that extra piece of paper lying around, waiting to be turned into something creative. Just sit down and let your thoughts and feelings flow through your pencil onto paper. The smooth running strokes will soon form art.

Although this is just one of the forms of art. There are also many different kinds of art classes. There are advanced painting and drawing, sculpture and ceramics, jewelry, commercial arts, and photography. Art classes are open to anyone, whether for an easy credit, a break in a hard schedule, or even for a career. Mr. Massoth comments "I make sure, for whatever reason, that the students work hard, and accomplish something!"

Contests and scholarships are also a part of these amateur artists' lives. One doesn't have to be artistically gifted to be in Mr. Massoth's class because everyone will have more skill after completing it.

Home Ec not all baking or sewing

Includes classes in life

The smell of baking cookies and the whirr of sewing machines usually popped into the minds of people who thought about Home Economics. More than cookies and clothes, Home Economics classes included classes such as Human Development, Interior Decorating, Home Management, and Needlecraft, as well as foods and clothing.

Most males did not associate themselves with the department, but actually the male enrollment was up about 25 percent from last year. Overall enrollment in the department was the same or up also.

Needlecraft was a newer class in which enrollment was up. Students learned to express their talents in knitting and other types of needlecraft. "The students who enrolled this year were talented and capable," said Mrs. Martha Nordlin, head of the department.

Human Development was a popular class which taught students how to deal with life and the ups and downs it hands you. "It is a good way to understand the way people get along with others," said Kari Trygg, senior.

The cookies baking could be smelled in the foods room. "Foods is fun and it helps you when you move out of the house," said Jessica Hostetter, junior.

The courses offered through Home Economics helped students cope with life during and after high school.

Speaking is easier than some thought

Myers conquers No. 1 fear

"How would you like to win a million dollars or a cruise around the world? Too bad that isn't what I'm here to speak to you about."

This is one of the ways a student in Mrs. Claryn Myers' speech class would begin their speech. Although giving speeches of the main activities covered in speech class there are other things that do go on during this class.

Mrs. Myers said, "I like to try to cover different aspects in speech. I try to have the students work on their listening abilities as well as their vocal ability."

One way Mrs. Myers accomplished this in class was by reading short stories or articles. Afterwards she gave a short quiz. The grades weren't counted, but the test itself was a self-check on how well the students listened.

Another assignment was the tongue-twisters. This was to gain flexibility of the tongue during speech.

Along these same lines, students also practiced vocal exercises in which they could express different feelings in different situations. Keith Hensley, junior, commented, "I think this class is a lot more fun than I thought it was going to be. Other people have to go through the same thing I have to."

I swear, you guys, the fish I caught was this big — really! exclaims Marcey Syndrom, sophomore to her speech class.

Group discussion is not only an essential part of speech class; it is also fun.

Special Ed. helps
Participants go own pace, staying in the mainstream

Special Education was designed for students who need small group instruction, a slower pace, a structured environment, or tasks suited to their learning level.

"We have a total of ninety students enrolled in three programs: learning disabilities, mentally handicapped, and emotionally handicapped," said Ms. Laura Megles, department head.

Subjects that were covered included English, math, science, U.S. History, government, health, foods, and vocational education. In each subject a variety of lessons, skills, and activities were used.

"Special ed. has really helped me to control my actions during class," commented Robert Ecenbarger, sophomore.

Mrs. Megles said, "Special students need special attention that cannot be met in a regular classroom setting. These students need extra help in their learning that students in the mainstream don't always need."

It takes a patient teacher to teach special ed. students. Mrs. Stillwell waits for a student to compose his answer.

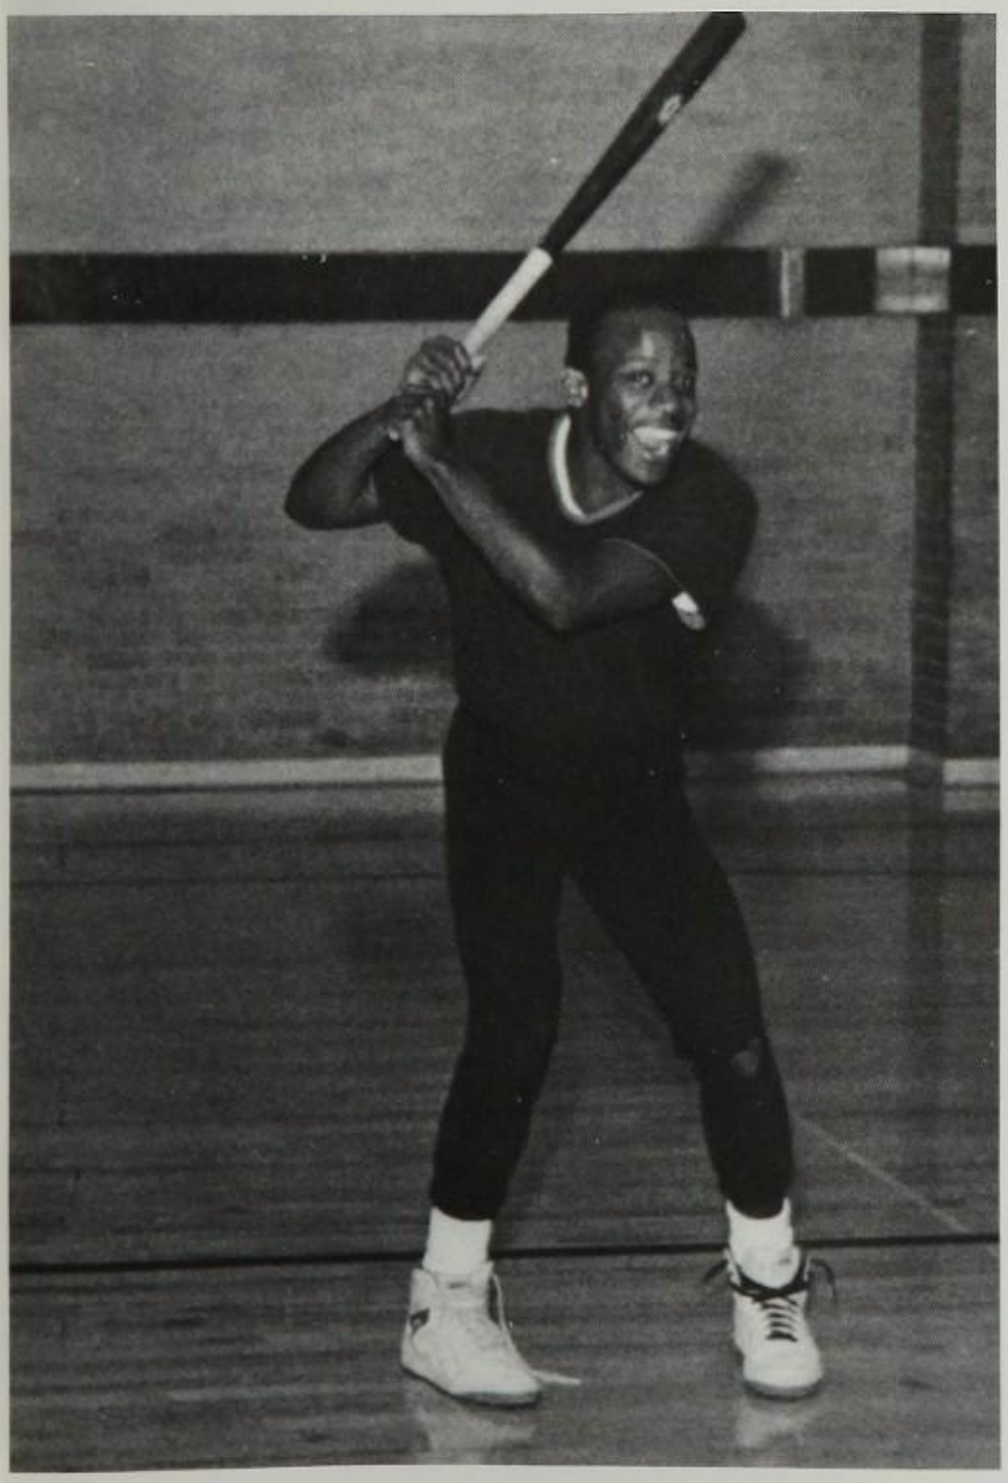
Lifesaving was a hard class. Through Mr. Talliaferro's instruction this class hopes to be among Ft. Wayne's future lifeguards.



P.E. brings health
Emphasizes lifetime sports

The P.E. program offered a good balance of activities: everything from the required freshman and sophomore course to the advanced courses. Among them were bodybuilding, advanced team and individual sports, a dance class, and advanced lifesaving. The advanced program involved 154 students.

Students who passed lifesaving earned the "Lifeguard Trainer Certificate" which very few people in Indiana have.

"It's a lot of swimming," commented Kevin Brubaker, junior.

"It gets you in shape," added Scott Selby, also a junior.

The five teachers in the department graded their students on effort, not on their athletic performances.

"I encourage everybody to do their best, but I reward students on their participation rather than their athletic ability," said Ry Taliaferro, department chairman.

Mrs. Leeann Reed focused on lifetime sports in her sophomore classes. She included tennis, golf, archery, and swimming to create interest.

"Sophomore gym is a little more boring (than freshman gym), but she is a good teacher. She knows what she is doing and gives good explanations." Todd Hattery, sophomore, explained. "Lifetime sports are important to stay healthy in later life," commented Mrs. Reed.

by Steve Lyng

Enjoyment is also stressed in P.E. classes. It looks like strike three for Jeff Burnett, a junior who is really enjoying whiffle ball.

Stratford trip enjoyed fully

Honor students ecstatic; see Shakespearean plays

The Stratford travelers, thirty students who spent two days in Stratford, Canada, divided their time between both cultural events and leisure.

It was sponsored by Helicon, a new honors English club. The students saw both the well-known musical, "Cabaret," and "Othello," a Shakespearean play.

"Everything was wonderful, and to view actors portraying the Shakespearean play was terrific," said Mrs. Susan Boesch, chaperone.

Following the Stratford Redskins in their free time, what little there was of it, would probably have been impossible. "Most of us went shopping, but others took in the country and took walks through the parks. Go if you have the chance. It feels really good to see a book that you have read acted out on stage," said Kim Baber, senior.

Other Redskins sacrificed their free time to see a third play, "Much Ado Abou! Nothing." This meant that for only $165, excluding spending money, many fortunate juniors and seniors had the opportunity "not only to experience two or three plays, but also another country, and have a sense of freedom," said Melacyn Turner, senior.

With the reorganization of Helicon, such opportunities were available in different ways. The Stratford travelers set the pace.

The whole group of students, who traveled seven hours on the way up, prepare to return home with smiling faces.

Varsity has winning year

With the only loss of the season to number-one-ranked Penn, the varsity football team had a prosperous year. "The football season was a wonderful experience for me. We had excellent leadership from our seniors, and it reflected on the whole team. Next year STATE!" said Kevin McMillen, junior.

The season started off well, with the team winning every game played, including those against undefeated Bishop Dwenger and Snider. It swept along with the return of the victory bell, but ended with the only loss for the Redskins. "I think for everyone, the most upsetting thing was our first loss of the season to #1 Penn," said Tino Talamantes, junior.

Reserve: future looks good

The success of next year's varsity football team depends partly on this year's reserve team. With that in mind, the future looks promising. "It was a good season for us, even though we did not go 8-0; but I think it helped a lot, because reserve playing time is for learning and improving skills for varsity level," said Mike Langmeyer, sophomore.

The team won its first six games and lost only its last two in close matches with Snider and Dwenger. The defense had four shutouts and outscored their opponents 112-33.

"We had a good group of athletes whose hard work is evident by their record," said Scott Brown, reserve football coach.

A new school, new friends, and new activities are only a few things freshmen have to experience. To make things easier and have some fun too, a few chose to join the freshman football team.

Spikers look great

The future seems bright

There is a saying which states that practice makes perfect. It paid off for the reserve volleyball team. "We were basically an on-off team, said Coach Laura Meagles. "When we were on we played very well, but when we were off we did not play so well. Everything seemed to come together at the end of the season when we won the S.A.C. reserve tournament," Mrs. Meaglas commented.

"They had to be organized to be able to practice, go to matches, and still get assignments completed. Some kids may have been motivated to do well to remain on the team," replied Mrs. Meaglas.

Potential improves Team Succeeds

Frosh have higher rating

What came after a serve, a spike, and a score? The answer to that is victory for the volleyball team. "They have a lot of talent and potential and they played very well," Mrs. Nita Auer, coach, said. "It was a good year, but I can't say it was one of the better years because each year it improves. There was a lot of talent and potential, and they will do very well in the next 3 years. If I had to compare our team to the other teams we have played, then I would have to say that we were at a higher rate and that we had much better athletes," Mrs. Auer said.

Places in final round

The women's volleyball team had a successful season with a 6 and 3 SAC mark and a 15 and 12 overall record. The young team placed in the final round of both the Prairie Heights and Richmond invitational tournaments during mid-season play.

Consisting mostly of juniors, with only three seniors, Jennie Bruening, Deanna Krouse and Tonda Briggs, the spikers were lacking in height. Coach Ry Talliaferro commented that the quickness and desire of the players made up for the deficit.

In reserve play Melanie Trolio, sophomore, earned the MVP award for leading the squad into the final round of the SAC reserve tourney. The reserves went on to win the final game and were crowned SAC champs.

The future seems bright for coach Talliaferro's squad; eight varsity players and the reserve champs will return next year.

Hampered by injuries

The men's tennis team was young, consisting mostly of juniors. The only senior was captain Marc Johnson, who filled the No. 2 singles spot. The No. 1 and No. 2 spots were filled by Jeff Hagerman and Scott Chandler, juniors. Playing doubles were Jason Wagoner and Jeff Mettler, followed by Pat Didier, juniors and Phil Michaeloff, sophomore, in the No. 2 doubles spot. They placed fifth in the S.A.C. with a 5-4 conference record and a 106-1 overall record.

"I think we had a good year, but sometimes we lacked motivation in big matches," commented Phil Michaeloff, sophomore. Injuries hampered the team midway through the season as Jeff Hagerman went out with a sprained ankle, leaving the team without a strong performer in the No. 1 spot.

Winning the sportsmanship award was Marc Johnson. The mental attitude award went to Scott Chandler. Rounding out the semi-successful season for the Redskins was the selection of Jeff Hagermen (10-7), Jeff Mettler (11-6), and Jason Wagoner (12-5) to the All-S.A.C. second team.

Frustrating season

Nagging cold for Dietsch young runners on top

A frustrating season, with nagging illness and a slow start were some of the problems the men's cross country went through during their season.

Coach Tom Knudson explains, "It was a frustrating year for some runners, but we had young athletes that really did well for their first year."

The men's record was three wins, nine losses, even though it wasn't their best year it did bring out some good freshmen runners. Vince Dietsch, senior, placed eleventh in sectional considering a nagging illness part of the year, causing him to miss parts of the meets and practices.

"Learning Season"

Slow, rough start for varsity

New coaches for varsity, frosh

Even though they didn't have any last-minute victories, and their stats weren't the greatest, the varsity girls' record was deceiving. There was great improvement from the start of the season to the end.

"I thought we had the potential to do better, but we didn't work as team like we should have," commented Liz Caywood, junior.

The varsity and freshman teams added two new coaches, Mr. Mark Daniels, freshman coach, and Miss Tonya Burns, varsity coach. Mr. Dean Slavens remained coach for the reserve team.

"Because I had a lot to learn for my first year as coach, the girls and myself worked hard and all improved," said Coach Burns.

The freshman team did quite well, losing only two games out of the fourteen the whole season and also winning the North Side Tourney-the best start ever for a frosh team.

A new rule was added to the game, giving players a chance to raise their scores. A three-point system, allowed any player shooting from the base or the top of the key to receive three points. Coach Burns seemed to like the idea.

Players had the opportunity to receive the hustle award given to them at their banquet. Pepsi also gave out a certificate for the player who showed the best enthusiasm, skill and attitude.

Mandy's best score was a 37 at McMillan Park. She also was medalist in seven matches. Michelle Fraser, junior, was a medalist in two of her matches. Both ladies were honored at the first all-conference banquet for the top ten golfers in the city.

"The team was very competitive in all its matches," commented Mrs. Linda Frick, coach. The best score was a 192 to defeat Northrop and East Noble.

There were three new members on the team, Jessica Henry and Tanya Bickel, freshmen, and Karen Schlagenhauf, junior. Birdie pins were awarded to Mandy Gadomski, Michelle Fraser, and Teri Tarr, juniors; Jessica Henry, freshman; and Lisa Tarr, sophomore. It was a tough year

Optimism kept teams going

This was the 31st year that By Hey was the coach of the boys' basketball team. He said that this year was no different from any other year and he enjoyed coaching such a fine team.

The year was a challenging one for all the teams. There were a lot of games that were close and were lost by only a few points; but on the other hand, they did win games that made up for their losses.

Juniors Mark Studebaker and Paul Alfeld agreed, "It was a tough year, mostly it was a learning season for a lot of us. It was unfortunate we couldn't have done more to have a better season. Most likely next year we'll expect to have a great season."

Hey said the team did well, and they were led by senior Tommy Smith and supportive junior players. The team adjusted well on the varsity level compared to the reserve games they played last year.

The teams ended their seasons as follows: Varsity, 6-14 record; Reserve, 4-14 record; and Freshman, 6-10 record. Coaches were by Hey and John Ankenbruck, Varsity; Steve Smethers, Reserve; and Freshmen, Tim Witte. That was a change for Witte, since he had been varsity women's coach.

Hey believes next year's teams will be better on the experience level. Several players that played this well will definitely "stick out" next year.

Energetic girls

New squads work for all; crowd more excited, involved

A lot of hard work and dedication goes into being a cheerleader. "We put a lot of enthusiasm in the crowd, so it can help the team onto a successful victory," explains Wendy Bass, junior.

A new system of squads was introduced. Cheerleaders had the decision of either cheering for both seasons or for fall or winter. There were five regular cheerleaders for both seasons, and then three who would be in to cheer for one season. The latter group sat out to give the other three a chance to cheer.

"It seemed to work out well; the girls seemed less burned out after each game. The girls' cheers this year were better because they got the crowd more excited and involved," commented Mrs. Beth Stillwell, sponsor.

Stacey Case, junior, added, "I really enjoyed cheerleading, and it gave me a good feeling to know that I could help the teams out."

Sponsors for this year were Mrs. Dee Herman and Mrs. Stillwell.

Wrestlers avenge

Ingol qualifies for state

The slogan for wrestling was "for competitors only". Highlighting the season was the tremendous performance of Bernard Ingol, a senior heavyweight. Bernard won his sectional and regional and then qualified for state. Although he did not place in the state meet, he finished with a respectable 29-3 record. Another triumph for the program was Tino Talamantes' sectional win at 145 pounds. Tino finished fourth in regionals just missing a semi-state birth. Tino finished the season at 18-11. As a team the wrestlers finished the year at the 6-8 mark and were 4-5 in the S.A.C. Mr. Chris Svarczkopf, head coach, commented that from a team standpoint, the team accomplished a lot; among these were a great attitude, togetherness, and doing the things necessary to win. The closing dual meet with Homestead was really a high point for Mr. Svarczkopf. "A good effort avenged last seasons loss," he said.

Keeping in shape

Early risers liked competition

Keeping in shape, experiencing the excitement of competition, and the wide variety of sports brought participants to intramurals.

Students chose from soccer, basketball, volleyball, and hockey. Disadvantages of getting up early to get to school by seven seemed to affect some students, but getting plenty of exercise and improving their favorite sport seemed to make up for it.

Mr. Ry Tailiaferro was the only sponsor, with the exception of Mr. Dave Bierbaum, who was the sponsor for intramural soccer.

The program gave students an opportunity to use or develop their athletic abilities. Rick Neuhaus, junior, said, "I liked to play intramural soccer, because it gave me a chance to compete with my friends and it kept me in shape."

GYMNASTICS

Gymnasts do well

Anderson and Studler go off to state

There was more to the gymnastics team than cartwheels, backhand springs, vaulting and swinging on the uneven bars. There was also a lot of dedication and hard work. Their practices (six days a week) paid off. The team lost only one meet the whole season, which was to Homestead. Dr. Ron Weiss said, "It was a nice way to finish the season." The team consisted of only one senior, Kathy Didier, with additional hard working gymnasts.

Melanie Anderson and Irene Studler did well. "Although both of them did well on the team, they did it in two different ways," Dr. Weiss said. "Melanie was very precise, consistent and strongest during the SAT, while Irene was spectacular and less consistent."

"This year's team scored high on all events, which is unusual. Next year's team can be stronger, but it depends on what they do off season."

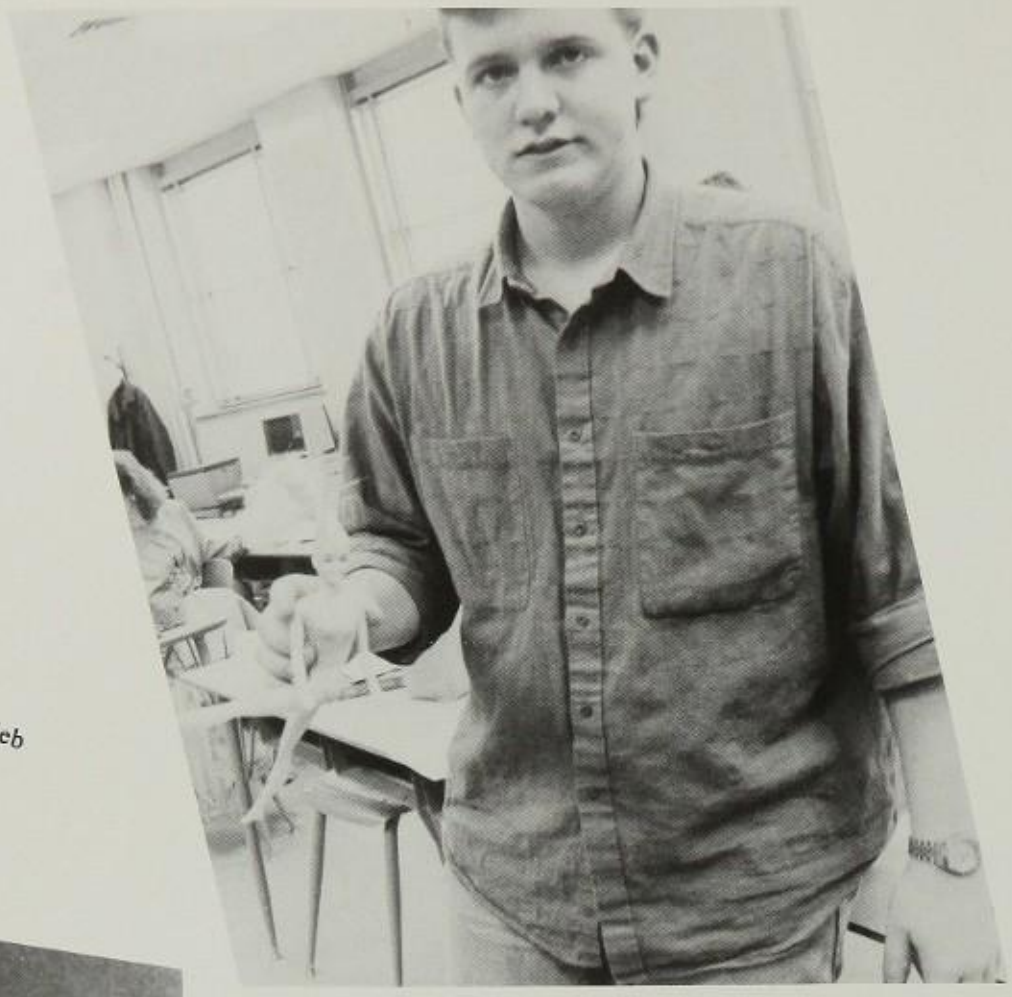
Sherry, Molly, and Michele: I'll get you in spotlight yet! BC



SR — Trip lately? Me too! Quit hanging out in closets! Friends forever! AB

Snoopo — want to go skiing? Luv, Keb

Liz — We've had some bullish times. This year is better than ever. My obsession with JT is hard to break! Yours is as bad! Speds always!!! PPUN Bethany "The Olympian"

Stacie,
Have a great summer! Don't forget me, I won't forget you.

Love, Bruce

YO! YO! FB — Oew, 2, Tho, Dho! MD — Purple! Friends Share Friends' Stuff! — FC

Opie — You're the best "Wimp" for the job. Someday they'll realize it too! Good Luck!! Love Ya! Amy

Angie, Teri, and Angi H., You're the best friends I've had.

B/F Tracy Butler

T-Bone and Little Ricky —
Flowers under covered trees. Cheers! My 2 best buds! I love you both bunches! From a fellow club member — Nance

Beth — Brr! What's the matter? Do you have to look at the pretty rock? JT is waiting for you at Cortland Manor! See you and Mildred at Pizza Prize! Pinch pennies: Liz

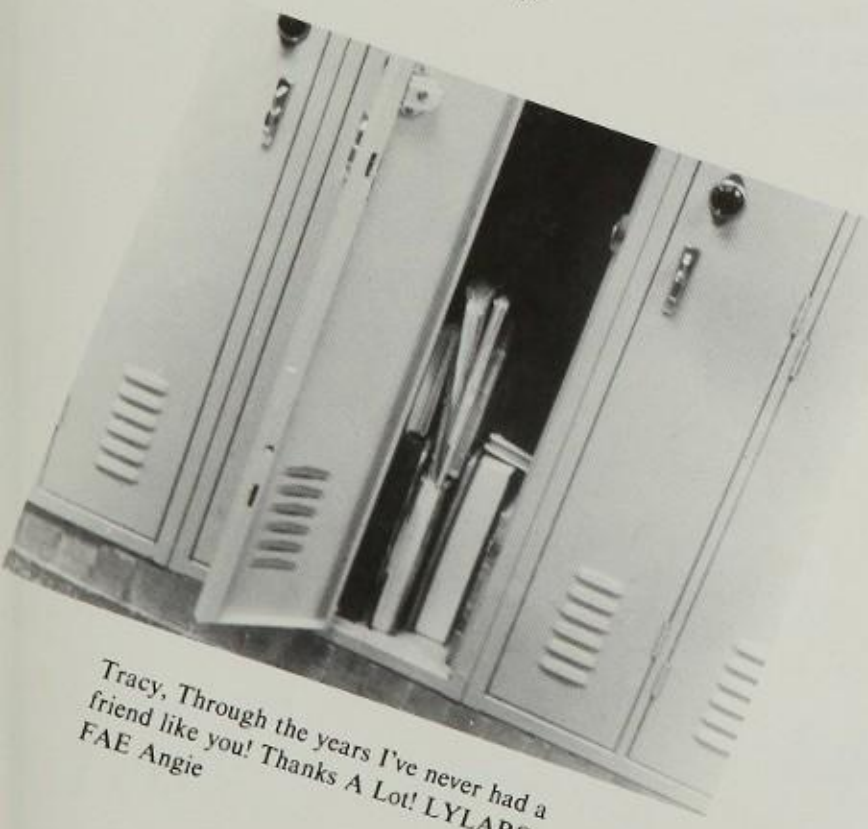
Steve
Hey man!! — From a fellow U2 fan!

Andy — Never forget: Late nights on derby, holidome, stoichiometry, Idol, U2, Prom, strange noises. I guess "This Is The World Calling" right? I'll miss letting you annoy me. With Love X212, Monica

Keith, Beth, Keli, Tim, Rick, J
Thanks for the memories you've placed in my heart. And for being the kinds of friends and people you are!! I love you!! Meri

Mike
We've had some great times together. You've made some of my fondest memories that will last me a lifetime. Good luck in everything — Teresa

To all my senior friends. Good luck in college and see you at the reunion. See you around, Scott



Tracy, Through the years I've never had a friend like you! Thanks A Lot! LYLARS-

WERE YOU AND THAT GUY FRANKIE IN LOVE, LISA?
NO, NOT REALLY...
PIZZA
I GUESS I JUST WANTED TO FEEL THAT I WAS IMPORTANT TO SOMEONE... BUT WE WEREN'T IN LOVE... WE WEREN'T...
WE WEREN'T IN ANYTHING EXCEPT THE BACK OF HIS VAN!
SOMETIMES I'M REALLY DOWN, AND OTHER TIMES I'M JUST MAD AT MYSELF FOR BEING SO STUPID!
IT ALWAYS SEEMED LIKE GETTING PREGNANT WAS SOMETHING THAT HAPPENED TO OTHER GIRLS! I NEVER GAVE IT A THOUGHT...
AND NOW IT'S THE ONLY THING I THINK ABOUT!

Peter Carlson, Nick Hess, Jim Brennan, Larry LaTourette, and Jay Debender, seniors, ham it up in Canada at the store Sabrina Fair; coincidentally, that was the title of the school production during the fall.

With the end of the school year coming around, one can walk through the halls and see the strength of friendship everywhere. Now is the time that the many remembrances flash through the minds of all, especially the departing seniors. The feeling of a family closeness is all around. Many generations of faces and personalities have passed through the cover of The Legend, and ours will be the next link of the North Side Circle.
